

Irene Victoria Massimino is a lawyer from Argentina working as a Rapporteur of the High Criminal Court of Buenos Aires Province (Tribunal of Cassation); she holds a Master of Laws from Indiana University and Purdue University at Indianapolis School of Law, USA and a Master of Arts in Human Rights from the School of Advanced Study of the University of London, UK. She is currently a Head Professor in the Department of International Education at the Universidad Nacional de Tres de Febrero, Argentina and Stockton University (New Jersey, US), Genocide and the Law for the Genocide Prevention Certificate of the Masters of Arts and Genocide Studies. Her main work as a scholar and human rights activists relates to issues of responsibility regarding genocide and other international crimes, especially related to the different processes of Memory, Truth and Justice in Latin America. Moreover, she is the Co-Director of the "Irak Project on Genocide Prevention and Accountability". Professor Massimino is also a member of the Asociación Americana de Juristas (AAJ-American Association of Jurists); a member of the Global Alliance for Justice Education; a fellow and former member of the Board of Directors of the Argentine NGO Asociación Pensamiento Penal, and a member and former Co-Secretary-Treasurer of the International Association of Genocide Scholars for the term 2015-2017.